Out-of-Field Notification to Parents/Guardians

The State of Florida requires all school districts to report to parents the classes that are taught by out-of-field teachers. A minimum qualification to receive a teaching certificate includes a bachelor's degree in a subject area from an accredited college or university. All teachers hold a valid State of Florida teaching certificate. Some teachers are assigned to teach a class or classes that are not in the subject area of their college degree. The following teachers are required to pursue certification in the field of their teaching assignment by taking college courses or passing a rigorous state exam.
